Quick Passage Of Act To Close Tax Loopholes Sought

Washington, July 30—AP—Legislation to close tax loopholes probably will apply to 1937 incomes, congressmen said today, in the hope of picking up $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 additional revenue.

Members of the senate-house tax investigating committee said that was one reason the administration desires the new bill enacted at this session. It has been virtually completed.

It will be relatively simple, members said, to take care of such tax reduction devices as incorporated yachts, country estates and hobbies by tightening up on allowable deductions.

They intend also to cover foreign and domestic personal holding companies, foreign insurance firms and non-resident aliens in their recommendations.

Technical and legal problems too intricate to solve speedily may prevent action this session against other tax avoidance practices. The question of multiple trusts is an example.

The committee has decided tentatively to eliminate a $1,000 deduction now allowed each trust. But there is a question of constitutionality involved in suggesting that all the trusts created by one individual be lumped together and taxed as one entity.

A transmission stunt designed to check up on why pigeons have a "homing instinct" as well as to see what effect, if any, short wave radio waves may have on them has been set for two of the NBC Chicago stations Saturday.

The tests will be another in the experiments by WENR, broadcast station, and W8XF, short waver, both located at Downers Grove, a suburb. Six pigeons are to be used, a pair to be freed near the aerial of each station and a third pair to be released several blocks from the stations. The flight times to their loft 30 miles away will be checked.

Carl Hassell, radio engineer in charge, in saying that recent experiments by the U. S. navy indicated homing pigeons become confused when subjected to short wave fields, added: "If these experiments can be verified we may settle the scientific enigma of how homing pigeons find their way; also, if pigeons are affected by radio waves it is possible we may learn more about radio waves as they may affect human beings."

A previous experiment with the pigeons on longer waves, Hassel said, was negative.

Burlington, N. C., July 30—Mack Leath, haled before Mayor Earl B. Horner on a speeding charge, heard Horner say, "I am going to give you 20 days on the roads—" The defendant dashed for an open door with several policemen in hot pursuit. After a chase of several blocks, Leath was back in court. The mayor resumed where he had left off: "—sentence suspended upon payment of the costs".

Help Wanted: Female

New York, July 30—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia wants a little feminine aid in managing New York city. "We can use quite a few women down at city hall," he said, urging more women to become candidates for public office. This is the third in a series of 11 articles dealing with deficiency diseases and their relation to the lack of certain vitamins in the body.

(NO. 279)

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association

Considered formerly a disease largely limited to the southern portions of the United States, pellagra has now been found in Minnesota, Illinois, and indeed occasionally cases are found in every state of the Union.

The condition was first described by a Spaniard in 1735. Later it was seen in Italy. Now it is seen all over the world. It may affect people of any age, although the majority of the cases appear in people of about 30 to 48 years of age. Women have it more often than men.

In 1915, more than 10,000 people died of this disease in the United States and it has been believed in the past that hundreds of thousands were affected.

* * *

The symptoms of pellagra usually come out in the spring and new cases are rarely seen in the fall or winter. While the cause of pellagra has not been completely established, it is now rather generally accepted that a lack of vitamin B2 is the factor.

It seems also to be obvious that in some cases the lack of vitamin B is due to inability to absorb the vitamin, as in certain cases in which prolonged consumption of whisky has interfered with the taking of food. There are also conditions affecting the stomach and the digestion which make the absorption of the vitamin B difficult.

In addition to a lack of vitamin B, it is possible that the diet is deficient in certain proteins. The work of the celebrated Joseph Goldberger of the United States Public Health Service seemed to establish quite definitely that pellagra does not develop in people who take a mixed, well-balanced and varied diet.

During periods of depression when some people find it difficult to secure sufficient amounts of food of the right kinds, the incidence of pellagra rises.

* * *

Among the chief symptoms of pellagra are those affecting the skin, the digestion and the nervous system. The eruption on the skin resembles ordinary sunburn and is usually seen first on the backs of the hands, later involving the neck, the forehead and the feet. Damage to the skin may result ultimately in scarring.

Since the inflammation of the skin appears chiefly on those sections which are exposed to sunlight, this is also believed to be a factor.

The mouth frequently is inflamed and sore, and there is also a persistent diarrhea in about 75 per cent of the cases. This diarrhea is, of course, responsible for the loss of fluid from the body and for the elimination of much of the food before it has been digested and before the body has been able to get its full value.

Along with the bowel disturbances, these people suffer with headache, dizziness, nausea, sleeplessness and sometimes with complete mental disturbance.

Pellagra should apparently not be difficult either to prevent or to cure.

NEXT: Prevention and treatment of pellagra.

Operation On Gland Saves Shrinking Man

Minneapolis, July 30—AP—Hans Nelson, who shrank 18 inches in height in five years, today credited a gland operation with saving his life and putting him "on top of the world."

He's gaining strength, he said, eating "anything" taking automobile trips and enjoying life. He's pleased also to know his case has aided others so afflicted.

Two years ago surgeons removed half of his parathyroid glands in an effort to stop the de-calcification of his bones that reduced his stature. He had been shrinking for 15 years until he was a stooped man of five feet.

Nelson still is five feet tall, but said he was growing stronger "every day" and looking forward to the time when he will be even more active.
